

Why Victoria Beckham is exhibiting 20th-century Italian art

Plus: the ethics of selling refugee art; A-Rod's painting goes unsold at auction; art's healing powers; and the new London art fair FFS

Victoria Beckham's latest collaboration with Robilant + Voena gallery © David Owens

By Melanie Gerlis

[...]

Victoria Beckham is back in the art business. While last year the fashion designer and former Spice Girl lent her name and stores to Old Masters paintings, this year's display of 20th-century Italian works is less imaginative (red monochrome dress next to red monochrome painting), but still works a treat. In collaboration with Robilant+Voena gallery, Beckham's London store now includes nine paintings and sculptures by the likes of Lucio Fontana, one of Beckham's favourite artists, and Agostino Bonalumi (until July 11, price range €200,000 to €3m).

Victoria Beckham's collaboration with Robilant + Voena gallery in the VB Dover Street store

[...]

Read the full article online: <https://www.ft.com/content/a6273edc-9ce9-11e9-9c06-a4640c9febb>